Job Application for Game Development

Dear Sir or Madam,

About Me

I'm a Software Developer, graduated in MS Computer Science with maximum score in Florence, Italy. After my graduation I started a period of academic research, during which I also started a PhD in quantitative analysis, but eventually I realised that research is not my path and decided to leave. I'm now actively pursuing my biggest passion of all time, Game Development. I've always been since young age a big videogames fan and I also love to code and develop all kinds of scripts and applications, which is why a career in the Game Development industry fills me with motivation and excitement. I also enjoy the idea of moving to a different place, learning new cultures and meeting new people (in the past, I have spent one year in Madrid, Spain, and another in Geneva, Switzerland, both times for training and working purposes).

Why Me?

Although I have no past professional experience in the field of Game Development, I am very motivated and passionate about mastering the necessary skills. I've always demonstrated, both during my University career and my internship experiences, that I'm a hard worker and if I set a goal for myself, I always manage to find a solution and overcome any obstacle. I also consider myself a very adaptable person and in many occasions I have proved that I'm a very fast learner, even in contexts where I had no prior knowledge of the skills needed. Last but not least, I enjoy working in teams, collaborating with many people and giving my personal contribute in the development of a project.

Sincerely,

TommasoPapini
